And, since I was spinning some wool that is dyed up in browns and blues... I started thinking about a really cheery pillow. The pattern came from here. It's not too terribly complicated, but the end result is just so cute! So here is my first attempt at pillow making... the pillow is too big and bulky to show it's final form. And I don't have a proper camera. (Well, I have a proper camera and I took the photo using it, but they just don't do the wool justice.) Next I'll have to figure out the machine that I need to finish this up. I think the quilter in me needs to know what the size should be. It's really just an excuse to play with something new. I love it! It looks like you just inserted a couple of plug-in cushions for it to sit on. This would also be a cute throw pillow. My next one will be a different, but less springlike color. Yours is a great choice. I'm a big fan of the wooly feeling a1d647c40b

There's no reason for you to be afraid." There was no reason for me to be afraid. June 6, 2012 – September 6, 2012 Gerry and Sam are taken out of danger. Not sure what to say, they tell me nothing about what they've seen or heard. They just reassure me that everything's going to be all right, they're going to get through it, and then it's going to be over. Gerry stays with me for another week. Sometimes he'll be home, and other times he won't. It's not that he doesn't want to be with me. It's just that he's having too much fun. He's going to be home this week though. I'm pretty sure that's what he's told me. On the night of the 6th, my parents are just about ready to call it a night, and while I'm talking to them, telling them what's going on, I decide I'm tired, and I want to go to bed. They ask me if I want to go to my dad's, or if I want to go stay with him. I want to stay with him. They don't question that, but they do question that it's not too late to get the kids from my dad's. I want to stay with my dad, and I'm tired of worrying about them. So I say yes, they'll take me to my dad's, and we'll go to bed. When
