Log4net custom Layout not working as expected I'm having an issue with the default layout for log4net. When I instantiate and add a log4net instance to a business object, I'm able to see a default version

of the layout in the console. However, when I run `log4net.Debug.Error("test", new object());` It doesn't render in the default layout that is generated by log4net, but rather in the custom layout that I created. If I

---

explicitly set the config like so `log4net.Config.XmlConfigurator.Configure(Assembly.GetCallingAssembly().Location + @"\App.config");` `log4net.Layout.SimpleLayout layout = new log4net.Layout.SimpleLayout();` `lay`

---

out.ConversionPattern =
"%d [%x]%-5p%c %m%n"; log4net.Reposi tory.Hierarchy.Logger logger = log4net.Logger.
Logger("logger", new lo g4net.Layout.PatternLay out(layout)); log4net.Log Manager.Log(logger);

---

log4net.ILogger loggerInstance = (ILogger) LogManager.GetRepository().Logger; It renders the custom layout, and when I add a line in this code to force it to render the default layout log4ne t.LogManager.Configure

(Assembly.GetCallingAssembly().Location + @"\App.config"); I get the default layout, so there is something about how the configuration is set on the log instance that's causing it to default to a non-default

layout, even though it is using the correct pattern.
Here is the relevant section of my
App.config 82138339de
