Political and legal issues in cystic fibrosis management: European perspectives. In this review, we describe and discuss the achievements made in cystic fibrosis (CF) management in Europe. The impact of European law, legislation and other determinants of medical and public health policy is also examined. The Declaration of Geneva and the Single European Act and other European directives have helped in promoting health care, research and information exchange in Europe. The European Union (EU) has provided new rights for CF patients in its European Social Charter, the European Charter of Fundamental Rights and the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union. A European service user network to facilitate the coordination of patient information on CF has been established through the European Lung Health Association. Developments in the management of CF have been made in Europe, with centres of excellence in genotyping, prenatal testing, perinatal, respiratory, and digestive care and other areas. All these efforts have increased knowledge and care for individuals with CF. The implementation of the Declaration of Geneva in Europe, as well as the new developments in CF management, has set the stage for future challenges and opportunities for European CF centres. Bending and Stretching Properties of Molecular Diamonds: Electronic Effects, Nucleation, and Kinetic Chemistry. The properties of nanomaterials are mainly determined by their crystal structure and the crystallite size, which may be controlled by processing methods such as thermal treatment, irradiation, and chemical etching. However, from the viewpoint of fundamental research 3da54e8ca3
